ROLLIN' HOME WITH NICK

Hello there, Nick here,

Well, I'm making slow but steady progress with the soundproofing of my new studio and I'm pleased to report that, a few weeks ago, the project received a major helping hand on the materials side of things. I was fortunate to be given a whole load of galvanised sheeting, which was otherwise going to be dumped, which will be perfect to line the walls with. (Thanks H!).

Shortly after this, I was put in touch with someone else (thanks again H!) who had a load of Rockwool soundproofing which was surplus to his requirements, so I took a load of it off his hands for a very reasonable price.

Shortly after that, I was given a load of wooden battens which I can fix to the walls to attach the galvanised sheets to. (Thanks Geoff!).

P.T.O.

So all in all, I did pretty well there. By my calculations I should have enough materials to do the whole studio and at a fraction of the price I was expecting to pay.

Can't be bad!

On the recording side of things, there's not an awful lot happening at the moment, but then it usually goes a bit quiet during the summer, (yeah I know, what summer?) but now some of the major events of the year have come and gone, Gorleston cliff top gala (Bowie tribute), Beccles Carnival, Tosh and Di's wine tasting, etc we may get around to making a start on recording the Moonlighters pub set CD that I mentioned in the last Tosh Tales.

Be seeing you, Nick
